

Kemo HQ Relocation and Expansion Completed (February 2024, for immediate release)

Kemo Limited, a member of the Engineering & Scientific Instrumentation Group (ESIG), is pleased to announce the completion of the relocation and expansion of its UK headquarters.

The new HQ is located in the centre of the historic town of Thetford, Norfolk, close to the major technology hub of Cambridge. The facility offers three times the space of the previous headquarters based in Dartford, Kent.

The relocation forms a significant part of the growth plan put in place for Kemo Limited following the take over by ESIG in 2022. As a business established in 1965 and previously based in and around the Kent region, it is a geographical shift, but one that puts Kemo into the catchment of high tech electronic skills from the Cambridge technology base.

The new facility features a new accelerometer & instrumentation calibration area which also contains the high precision component selection equipment which forms a critical part of the manufacturing process for the high performance, low noise electronic filter and signal conditioning systems which Kemo are famous for. Dedicated space for cable assembly and testing has also been a key part of the expansion to keep up with demand for stock and custom cable assemblies.

Neill Ovenden, Managing Director of Kemo Limited said 'This move completes a critical step within our plans for Kemo and represents the key to unlocking the future of Kemo. We have already been interviewing new staff with our first new appointment due to start within weeks. The relocation was hard work and my thanks go out to the team and all those that gave their time so generously.'

Thetford has a long history and was once the ancient capital of East Anglia, being a hugely important trading gateway along with the nearby city of Norwich. In more recent times Thetford and the surrounding area became a television town when it transformed into Walmington-on-Sea during the filming of the famous Dad's Army TV series from 1968 to 1977, hosting 80 episodes. The connection with Dad's army is fondly remembered in the town and visitors can take a selfie with a statue of Captain Mainwaring who sits by the riverside.
